

autonomic response testing

with liliás ahmeira

Autonomic Response Testing is an advanced form of muscle testing developed by Dr Dietrich Klinghardt, M.D.,Ph.D., that seeks to marry the American techniques and Philosophy of Applied and clinical Kinesiology, with the European developed therapy called Neural Therapy.

Autonomic Response Testing primarily focuses on the assessment of health and/or dysfunction of the Autonomic Nervous system. This system is the main regulator of normal and abnormal function of the body and nerves, as well as organs, tissues and cells, which are primarily influenced and controlled by autonomic homeostasis.

Autonomic Response Testing, therefore, includes many neurological tests that address the most common “illnesses” of the Autonomic Nervous System (ANS): toxicity of the nerve ganglia, hypo/hyper function, and blocked regulation.

Liliás Ahmeira has been at the cutting edge end of complimentary therapy/energy medicine for over ten years.

She was one of the first to introduce her areas of work as she came across them to the UK. Being the first accredited magnet therapist in the country, then introducing and drawing attention to other unknown at the time, fields such as Electronic Gem Therapy, Thoughtfield Therapy, Autonomic Response Testing and now she is introducing to the UK BioAcoustics.

No stranger to press, Liliás is well known to the media for her cutting edge techniques. Her opinions have been aired on BBC1 Breakfast News, and many other programmes, the Radio and in countless magazines and newspapers.

Until recently she ran a successful practice in central London and had Clients referred to her by respected Harley Street specialists, Physio's and Doctors. Liliás has now re-established herself at evolve in South Kensington after spending time in Aberdeen and now moving to the West Country.
